

Press Release

To celebrate the fall of the House of Windsor, the worlds most notorious crime family, Scorzayzee releases UK Hip Hop Classic on vinyl for the first time

Rap: Scorzayzee

Music: P Brothers

Art: Jamie Reid

Support the petition. No More Looting! Give Back the Star of Africa

The track was originally written as a stream of consciousness tempered by the Bush and Blair invasion of Iraq recorded in one take deep in the early hours of 16th April 2003 by Nottingham production team P Brothers. This is the first track that Zane Lowe played twice in succession in the same show and was subsequently banned from the BBC, reprimanded by parliament and shunned by Buckingham Palace. Now, for the first time, on Scorzayzee's very own boutique imprint; Gotham City, Great Britain, the British Hip Hop classic is available on vinyl and general release with a bag of remixes in the pipeline

“A Portrait of a nation torn apart by crime, poverty and political corruption” The Guardian

Great Britain is one of the great British protest songs, in harmony with, and epitomising the early relationship between Hip Hop and Punk, a lineage cemented by British artist Jamie Reid, himself responsible for the iconic Sex Pistols art and imagery of the late 70's, who contributes to the songs statement with vivid artwork placing the monarch in a more realistic light from its media fawning and sycophancy, emphasising the demonic nature of the Battenberg / Savile Pedophile clan.

“More offensive than God Save The Queen” The Telegraph

Through an obscenity-laced television interview in December 1976 and their May 1977 single, "God Save the Queen", attacking Britons' social conformity and deference to the Crown, the Sex Pistols precipitated the punk rock movement.

“Too Extreme” Julie Kirkbride Shadow Culture Secretary of Britain

This is a cultural corner stone for British music, constantly relevant and at last available for all to enjoy at a time when the country reflects on, institutionalised racism born of its establishments' colossal wealth and power built upon slavery and genocide of millions of africans, Indians and poor people the world over.

“No Comment” Buckingham Palace

A Constitution for Britain

Accompanying this record is a campaign to promote Tony Benn's Constitution for Britain, which we have made available to download for free. The Constitution proposes a series of reforms to democratise the Britain.

- The monarchy would be abolished and the constitutional status of the Crown ended
- The Church of England would be disestablished
- The head of state would be a president, elected by a joint sitting of both Houses of the Commonwealth Parliament
- The functions of the royal prerogative would be transferred to Parliament
- The Privy Council would be abolished, and replaced by a Council of State
- The House of Lords would be replaced by an elected House of the People, with equal representation of men and women
- The House of Commons would similarly have equal representation of men and women
- England, Scotland and Wales would have their own devolved National Parliaments with responsibility for devolved matters as agreed
- County Court judges and magistrates would be elected
- British jurisdiction over Northern Ireland would be ended
- The judiciary would be reformed and a National Legal Service would be created
